The county officers at Hillsboro have moved into the new Court House.

Mr Henry Gilfrey, Private Secretary to the Governor, started on Monday for Linkville, on business connected with State lands in the Klamath country.

Mr T. McF. Patton, Grand Master, visited Jefferson Lodge No 38, A F. & A M, Saturday evening He reports not only this Lodge, but the Order throughout Oregon, as in a flattering prosperous condition.

Five persons—two men, a youth and two women—received the rite of baptism by immersion on Sunday afternoon. The day being extremely pleasant, the concourse of people present to witness the ceremony was very great.

The Hon. Judge Hyer Jackson, of Washington county, while out examining some ditching on his farm near Hillsboro, that had been reported damaged, stopped on a crust of earth that broke through, throwing him on his thigh and knee, striking a rail, bruising the knee in a manner as is likely to lay him up for a few days.

Capital Lodge, No. 11, I. O. G. T. Salem, elected the following persons as Delegates to the State Temperance Alliance last Saturday even ing: Col. T. H. Cann, Mrs. Helen Mc Clane, Miss M. Miller, Miss Minnie Stone, Wilson Ford, C. W. Scriber, Rev. B. J. Dawne, J. B. McClane and Mrs. Louisa Cann.

The Statesman of the 11th says: "We saw yesterday a pair of lately made socks from the Beaver Hosiery Company at Jefferson, which, in the matter of heeling and toeing are one peg ahead of the old style of machine knit socks In these the heels and toes are knit entirely by the machine and require no more hand work than fastening a few stitches in each.

THE TERRITORIES.

A bill to convey to Washington Territory, for Insane Asylum purposes, the Steilacoom Military Reservation, passed the House of Representatives last session, and is now pending before the Senate. A bill to ratify the sales of about 3,000 acres of school lands, made by the Territorial officers in good faith, but without proper authority is in the same condition.

The Territory of Wyoming is known to be very rich in coal, most of which is of a bituminous character. But for various reasons this coal makes little impression on the market of San Francisco. A single coal company in San Francisco have the inside track—that is they make such terms with the railroad company as to practically exclude other companies from competition.

The Olympia Tribune has this: "We are informed that the people of Victoria are moving actively to procure the rescinding of Secretary Boutwell's recent order forbidding the Prince Alfred to carry freight from San Francisco to the Sound. They are getting up petitions, representing their view of the matter, which they will circulate for signatures among the mercantile classes of the Sound. The freight to and from the Sound is estimated to be one-fourth that carried by the steamer, and the number of passengers at one-third. If the Prince Alfred were deprived of this trade, unless heavily subsidized by the British Columbians, she would be obliged to draw off the the route How would it be if an American ship were put on in her place?"

The S F. Bulletin says "The Salt Lake Tribune claims that Utah is richer in coal of all grades than any of the adjoining Territories. It hopes to find a market in the State of Nevada alone for 600 to 1000 tons daily. The same authority states that anthracite coal is abundant in Utah. That is the very coal wanted in all the larger towns of California. Every country blacksmith wants it, and must have it at any price. The most formidable item, except iron, is the smith's bill for coal If Utah can furnish a good quality of anthracite coal, there would be no limit to the market Probably the search has been sharper for hard coal on this coast within the last two years than for any other mineral. If Utah has found it, there ought to be enterprise enough there to lay it down in this market"

The Salt Lake Mining Journal says that the Company, comprising "some of the best men in Missouri, Illinois and Pennsylvania," has an abundance of capital and perfect knowledge of the construction and maintenance of railroads Another scheme is that now being developed by the Salt Lake, Sevier and Pioche Narrow Gauge Railroad Company, of which General P. E. Connor and Captain Jacobs, are active managers. A portion of this road has been graded, and the Journal says that by July the cars will be running to Ophir, and by fall the track will reach far toward the rich mineral and coal fields of Southern Utah. Other roads are projected and work upon them has been prosecuted from the Utah Southern to Alta and Bingham canyons, and under the present vigorous management they will be completed during the coming summer.

The Idaho Statesman has the following account of the religious revival at Boise City the style of which—the account, not the revival—shows that the writer is not exactly at home in writing of such matters He says: "We are pleased to notice that Smith Barker, the old and sturdy pioneer, and knight of the ribbons, took up the cross, promised to amend the error of his ways, retrieve his past follies, and live a better and more useful life We wish him success in his new path of duty and a long and peaceful life Jim Mitchell, the hard fisted pioneer of blacksmiths, also came forward and made similar promises, which, no doubt, he will sincerely live up to, and become a devoted follower of the Saviour We understand that two or three others also came forward and experienced religion There is certainly a large field in this Territory for the ministry, and we are glad to see a man of so much enterprise and ability as Elder Gwinn here to take hold of the work. We shall chronicle the result of his labors as the work progresses"

CREDIT MOBILIER.—An offer has been made to Mr Pollard's Committee to furnish evidence to prove that—

The profits of the Credit Mobilier, on its contracts for the construction of the Union Pacific railroad, amounted in June, 1868, to $46,950,000, that previous to that date there had been distributed as dividends on Credit Mobilier stock $23,200,000, that at that date there were on hand profits subject to distribution on Credit Mobilier stock $18,750,000,

What profits were made or distributed subsequent to July 1, 1868, as not yet ascertained

The ratio of distribution in June, 1868, was, on each share of Credit Mobilier stock, $1,252, and they were distributed.

The money used in the construction of the Union Pacific railroad came from the following sources:

First The bona fide purchasers of the Union Pacific railroad stock

Second Sales of United States bonds.

Third. Sales of first mortgage bonds, and perhaps a part from Fourth The Government land subsidies.—Washington Chronicle.

Somebody has been summing up the fate of Kings and Emperors as follows Out of two thousand five hundred and forty Emperors or Kings over sixty four nations, two hundred and ninety one were dethroned, sixty four abdicated, twenty committed suicide, eleven went mad, one hundred died on the battle field, one hundred and twenty three were made prisoners, twenty five were pronounced martyrs and saints, one hundred and fifty one were assassinated, sixty-two poisoned, and one hundred and eight were sentenced to death. Total, nine hundred and sixty-three

The telegraph announces the occurrence of a terrible earthquake at Samos, which caused great loss of life and property. Samos is one of the Greek islands, and an ancient seat of Hellenic culture It is about 27 miles long by 10 miles wide, and had a population of 50,000 a few years ago. It has been famous from time immemorial for its corn, oil and wine, and is memorable as the birthplace of the philosopher Pythagoras Its inhabitants are noted for their brave resistance to Turkish tyranny It was in the strait separating Samos from the mainland that the fleet of Xerxes was beaten by the ancient Greeks, nearly five centuries before Christ Like most of the Mediterranean islands, Samos has frequently been the scene of earthquake disturbances.

It took several years of costly litigation to obtain from the Supreme Court of Vermont a declaration to this effect That a Mrs Drew, who cut some grass on the public highway in order that her children might have a path by which they could get to and from school without getting their clothes wet, committed no crime, but that as Mrs. Drew fed nine pounds of this grass to her husband's horse, she committed a trespass, for which she was responsible to the state of Vermont.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, Feb 11—The Vice President announced as a Special Committee to investigate the charges against Pomeroy, Mosier, Frelinghuysen, Buckingham, Alcorn, Thurman and Vickers. The House bill extending the Southern claims commencing four years from March 10th, 1873, was taken up The question being on the Senate Committee's vote extending it to January 11, 1876 it was agreed to A second amendment was to exclude all claims not presented on or before March 3d, 1874

The unfinished business of Alabama claims bill was taken up

The Central Pacific Railroad has provided for the possible failure of the Goat Island bill by having inserted in the House River and Harbor bill a clause instructing the Secretary of War to order a survey and examination of Oakland Harbor This bill will be reported favorably to morrow by the Committee on Commerce Houghton says this is done with a view to an appropriation next session, for dredging the bar and improving Oakland Harbor so as to admit the entrance of large ships Friends of the Central Pacific Railroad say the heavy freighting of railroads will be done either at Goat Island or Oakland and that they are disposed to expose future plans in detail in reference to Oakland It is rumored that a decided movement in that direction has been inaugurated, the result of which depends upon the final vote on the Goat Island bill No quorum was present at a meeting of the Senate Military Committee to-day, therefore they did not report on the Goat Island bill To-morrow evening the committee will meet again and by courtesy may listen to an argument of Mr Casserly, when they will dispose of the bill finally.

C. C. Huntington, in conversation a few days ago, stated that within two years he intended to dispose of all his interests west of the Rocky Mountains and confine himself to operations in the east He denies that any negotiations have been entered into for the transfer of Central Pacific bonds to Thos Scott.

The House Committee on Commerce inserted in the river and harbor bill instructions to the Secretary of War to have surveys and examinations made with a view to harbor improvements in California—Santa Cruz, Ballnas river, Estero Bay, in Santa Barbara, and Oakland

A combined effort is being made to carry all steamship subsidy bills pending in the Senate as amendments to the postoffice appropriation bill, which passed the House, and is now before the Senate Committee on Appropriations.

The House Committee on Postoffices will grant a hearing to-morrow to representatives of the local newspaper interest affected by the second section of the bill This section imposes a prepayment of all papers sent through the mail, except such weekly papers as are actually and wholly printed in the county in which they are published There are nearly 1,300 country newspapers which have one side of their issue printed at larger cities, and to make these prepay on papers sent to their subscribers, would result in a suspension of the majority of them.

Oakes Ames gets into Trouble.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—A Washington special says it is known that Oakes Ames failed to find the receipt signed by Colfax for the $1,200 check, and that he probably has no letter from Colfax on the subject Colfax's friends say he is ready to prove he received the $1,200 deposited by him in bank from another person than Ames The same special says there is a general belief that the investigation committee, whatever else they may do, have already decided to recommend the expulsion of Ames and Brooks.

The Greeley Will Case Decided

WHITE PLAINS, Feb. 10—Surrogate Coffin, of Westchester county, delivered his written decision in the matter of proving the last will of Horace Greeley, at the opening of his Court to day, ruling that the will of 1872 must be refused probate. The will of 1871, having been duly proved, must therefore be admitted as the last will and testament of Horace Greeley.

The Railroad Despotism and the Hard Times

The people of this State especially those of the Willamet valley have felt the hand of the railway despotism for the last two years in many ways They have paid such enormous charges for transportation on all the produce they have sent away and all the merchandise they have brought to their homes, as to leave themselves no reasonable compensation for their own toil nor for the money they have invested in their farms and shops The exigencies of the railway company have been such as to demand that every ton of freight should be forced to contribute the last cent it would bear in order to enable the company to pay the interest on its bonds The stress of this exigency made it necessary for the railway company to be freed from the competition of the line of the river boats that were plying on the Willamet and its tributaries when the railway was commenced The price of this purchase was not equal to the profits of carrying the crop of a single year and then, the ability of the railway company to procure the loans necessary to carry on its further enterprises, depended largely upon its present trade This could be greatly swollen by purchasing the boats on the river, and immediately inaugurating such a system of discriminations in favor of the railway and against the river, as would give the bulk of the trade to the former The purchase was made, the tariff of freight charges went up, and the discriminations inflated the railway traffic and the credit of the company, so that it was possible to effect negotiations abroad which would have been impossible under any honest administration of the railway company's affairs The burdens of this fraud were, and are borne by the producers the benefits enjoyed by Mr Holladay and his band of retainers The profits on the construction of the road, of course, went into the hands of the little Credit Mobilier, of which Mr Holladay was understood to be the master, and a dozen or so of political flunkeys, who are still blowing his horn, were the instruments. This money was spent for election purposes, a portion of it in the primaries and a portion elsewhere The enormous freights have been necessarily kept up in order to meet the interest on the bonds This money is all carried out of the country Those who hope to see better times will wait for the realization of their hopes till something can be done to obviate the necessity of sending away annually seven hundred thousand dollars to pay interest on borrowed capital This fund may be reached by the encouragement and support of competing transportation. Any considerable competition in the carrying business will bring freights down to the minimum paying rates, and that will relieve the pressure by keeping in the hands of the farmers a large portion of the money now paid to the railway company, and sent by it to Europe. This may reduce the income of the road to such an extent as to disable it from paying its interest, but that is not for the producers to look at They had no part in contracting these obligations, nor in the misrepresentations that enabled Mr. Holladay to contract them, and their honor is therefore not involved in the question of their liquidation. The interests of the producers is to act in harmony and take care of themselves, leaving the men who have brought about this state of things to work out their side of the problem as best they can

Under date of January 28th, the Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says that Mr. Patterson has made no movement toward asking for an investigation of the grave facts that tell against him, or to relieve the embarrassment which his remaining silent causes "Some of the opposition senators, in private conversation, show that they feel very keenly the degradation to which the entire body is subjected by allowing day after day to pass without action in the premises, but do not feel that it is proper for one of the minority to move a resolution of inquiry. It is reported that the Ohio State Board of Agriculture, who had tendered to Mr Patterson the Presidency of the Agricultural College of that State, have sent him a dispatch announcing their reconsideration of the offer. The interest in these investigations is daily growing more intense in Washington and very little else is talked about, either among politicians or private citizens"

Secret conferences among the adherents of the forlorn hope of Bonapartism have been frequent of late, if we can believe the myriad of flying rumors At Chiselhurst, for instance, it has just been decided that Eugenie and Prince Jerome Napoleon are to be the political guardians of the Prince Imperial Hereafter that promising infant will not be called Napoleon IV but will be known as Count Pierrefonds He has adopted as his motto, "Strength, but not Impatience" Had the "Nephew of his Uncle" written this upon his banners, Gravelotte and Saarbrucken would never have been known, Alsace and Lorraine would still be in France, and milliards of indemnity would now be in the Imperial Treasury at Paris

Hoax Ames is a fellow of infinite jest, if we are to believe Dr Durant The latter gentleman testifies that Mr A once asked him for items of expenditures in and about Washington The Dr naturally remarked "What do you want with the accounts? They have been examined by the board, passed upon and paid" "I want," said the guileless Hoax, "I want to see whether any money has been paid to members of Congress" "Why?" interrogated the Dr "Because I want them to pay it back if they do not go straight The Doctor adds cautiously that he supposes the answer was made "jocularly"

The New York Tribune of January 28th says there are, at least, indications in Congress of a purpose to complete the Washington Monument The House adopted a resolution on the 27th directing the Speaker to appoint a committee of thirteen to report a plan to secure its completion before 1876 Of course, the idea is that Congress shall furnish the money to avoid the national disgrace of permitting the centennial of American Independence to be celebrated while a monument to the Father of his Country stands unfinished in the Capital of the nation

A Washington dispatch to the Springfield Republican says there is a favorable though perhaps not radical, turn in Senator Sumner's case. He is at least stronger, and in better spirits, and promises himself an early return to his Senatorial seat, and the delivery of his speech, already prepared on the battle flag question.

Walt Whitman, poet and Clerk in the House of Representatives, is confined to his room in Washington by a shock of paralysis

NEW PUBLICATIONS

The February number of Scribner's Monthly is not a whit behind the best of its predecessors Its opening article The Tehuantepec Ship Canal gives a clear idea of a subject that never loses its interest How men Learned to Analyze the Sun is a very interesting paper on the spectrum analysis Dr Holland's new novel Arthur Bonnicastle is continued and the rest of the contents is a treat to the reader while the superb illustrations add greatly to the pleasure of perusing this magazine Scribner's is at the head of its class of literature

The Galaxy is always good It is scientific record for February is full of curious and useful knowledge It is needless to speak of the literary character of the contents of this periodical its contributors being the élite of American literati The prettiest thing in this number is the story of the Norway Emigrant

We are in receipt of the Fourth Annual Report of the Indian Commissioners covering the year 1872 It is a complete elucidation of the Indian policy of the Administration and exhibits its workings in the various sections of the country and under the different circumstances surrounding the operations of the Indian Department This work is peculiarly interesting just now in view of the present military campaigns of General Crook and General Canby on this coast. It can hardly be said that the peace plan has worked satisfactorily in the Pacific States and Territories except among those Indians who long ago ceased to think of resistance to the authority of the government The Quaker policy is a success where the Indians have first been reduced to permanent subjection, but until this is done, there is nothing else so certain to produce salutary effects as powder and ball The course of treatment which this morning's dispatches indicate that General Crook is administering to the Apaches of Arizona, is necessary to prepare the Indian constitution for the milder regimen of the peace policy

The following summing up of the conduct of the Central Pacific Railroad Company in California, which we clip from an exchange, would look as if it were written with express reference to the operations of Mr Holladay's railway ring in this State, but for the names of localities being different from ours

It has been a constant dead weight upon every leading industry for the last five years, has oppressed the counties with taxes, has cheated the State and counties out of their own just share of taxes has kept our Legislatures in a ferment of corruption, has paralized San Francisco by a standing menace to destroy its trade, has interfered in every conceivable pettifogging way to obstruct the natural settlers within the railway belt from perfecting their titles and harrassed them with ruinous lawsuits; has punished those who fell under its displeasure by discriminating charges against them in transportation, has interfered in the same malicious way to injure towns and counties that refused its demands, has tried to put the city of Sacramento under its feet by an attempt to monopolize its water front, has conspired to, and succeeded in, putting down all opposition lines of transportation by land or water, so that it might still increase its oppressive rates of fare and freight; and has, in fine, everywhere moved the general public to the bitterest hatred of its policy.

This mentatis mutandis, is an acurate picture of affairs in the Willamet Valley, as they have been for the last three or four years A road built by the bounty of the government as our roads have been, ought to be a benefit, not an injury to the trade of the country.

The municipal authorities of Washington City are already engaged in making extensive preparations for the Inaugural Ball. North Carolina's former Governor, Holden, who was removed from office by a Court of Impeachment, is said to be universally beloved by the poorer classes of that State A strong effort has been made in his behalf recently The resolution offered in the Lower House of the Legislature, relieving him of the disabilities imposed on him by the Court of Impeachment was defeated by a strict party vote of 58 to 51

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y Herald, writing under date of January 27th says that Senator Blair appeared in his seat in the Senate on that day for the first time in a month. The Vice President of the United States has been held above suspicion by the great party which honored him as their trustworthy servant The notable purity of the character of Schuyler Colfax was for a long time a sufficient answer to the charges of corruption and dishonesty which were made against him The Washington Chronicle and Boston Advertiser of late dates contain the allegations of Oakes Ames which were the first to cause doubt and alarm to take the place of complete confidence Mr Ames it will be remembered, swore that Mr Colfax had received a check for $1 200 on account of Credit Mobilier stock on June 20th 1868 A little over a week since Mr Colfax declared before Judge Poland a committee in the most impressive and emphatic manner that he had never received either the check or the proceeds of it Whereupon Mr Ames demanded that the books of the First National Bank be sent for, which was accordingly done The scene in the Committee room on the appearance of the cashier of the Bank, is thus described by the Washington correspondent of the Boston Advertiser

There were over a hundred people in the committee room to day when the cashier opened his books to the pages where Mr Colfax's accounts were recorded There was perfect silence in the room as the members of the committee ran over the dates and amounts When Judge Poland pointed out to the cashier the sum of about nine teen hundred dollars deposited June 22 1868, and asked him to produce the deposit ticket for it the stillness became oppressive, and when the ticket was produced and found to be in Mr Colfax's hand writing and the first item entered on it, was "bank notes twelve hundred dollars," no one spoke or moved or seemed to breathe for a time, which appeared to be a full minute, and for several minutes afterwards all movements and tones and impressions in the room were such as are seldom seen or heard or felt, except in the presence of death In justice to Mr Colfax, it should be stated that in the face of all this circumstantial evidence he still insists that he never had that check from Mr Ames, and never received its proceeds He says he now remembers that about that time he received a sum approximating a thousand dollars from a friend, and he has telegraphed to night for the details

The sensation caused by the whole matter as it affects Mr Colfax can scarcely be exaggerated yet all agree that his high character and hitherto unsullied reputation is entitled to the full benefit of the doubt which arises from the fact that the $1,200 deposited the 22d of June was not of necessity the proceeds of the check given on the 20th by Mr Ames for that amount

At the very time, says the New York Tribune that the cashier of the First National bank was exhibiting the tell-tale accounts in the Poland Committee room, a strange scene was being enacted in the Senate

The Vice President, after the prayer, called the Senate to order, presented one or two communications from the other House and from the Executive Departments, and then, in the midst of a painful stillness, read from a half sheet of note paper a request that a committee of his political opponents be appointed to investigate the damaging accusation, that had been made against him, and called Mr. Anthony to the chair. No more impressive event has occurred in the Senate for many a day than when the Vice President left the Chamber, and Mr Pratt, apparently very much affected, moved the appointment of a Committee of Five

Mr Thurman objected that even if the Vice President should be found guilty, the Senate could not punish him since he was not a Senator, that the only method of reaching him was by impeachment, and the House must begin that of its own accord. So the resolution was defeated

There can be no doubt that the general sentiment of the people of Oregon is hostile to the plan of treating with the Modoc butchers on any terms but war to the knife And this sentiment is not accompanied by any desire for useless carnage It is no longer a matter of policy with us—this Modoc question—but it has become a forced necessity that these red fiends should be reduced to complete submission or exterminated root and branch They have now shown their true disposition, which is to scalp and pillage. But a Peace Commission has been appointed, and we are forced to accept it at the hands of the government, whose "wards" these diabolical murderers have become. Perhaps the excerpt given below may throw some light on the origin of this Commission. It is taken from the Washington Chronicle of January 28th

PROPOSED SETTLEMENT WITH THE MODOCS

As we gather from an interview with several Oregon gentlemen in this city, among whom is Mr. Applegate, who has been in that remote country for thirty years, and has had much to do with the Indians, the Modoc tribe does not number more than 200 fighting men They were recently assigned to a reservation adjoining and formerly belonging to that of the Klamath tribe The latter tribe do not relish the proximity of the Modocs, and are not satisfied to see land they once claimed diverted in that direction, although they deeded it away As a consequence, they have annoyed their new neighbors until the latter said, we will not stay where we are, and took up their line of march to other hunting and fishing grounds The military attempted to force them back to their unconsenual locality they resisted, commenced a fight, raided among the settlers, and proved that they could be very ugly customers Taking refuge in a volcanic region, among caves and gorges in the mountains, they defy their assailants. The gentlemen alluded to above have advised that the requests of the Modocs be complied with, and that they be granted a small reservation five miles square that they have designated until such times as all the tribes can be gathered in a coast reservation where a range of mountains will seperate between them and the settlers They advise the appointment of a commissioner—a gentleman who enjoys the confidence of Captain Jack and his tribe—to treat with the tribe, and a cessation of hostilities which are so profitless and expensive The President, the Secretary of war and the Secretary of the Interior have the matter under consideration, and will probably reach a conclusion at the Cabinet meeting to day

We trust that the problem will be satisfactorily solved, and that a bill of expenses, to be followed in the end by what can as well be done at the beginning, will be avoided A troop of camp followers and train men are alone to be benefited by hostilities that, if continued may finally arouse the hot blood of other tribes and lead to a general war with them

Mr Applegate is emigrant agent for Oregon He regards the conflict as very prejudicial to the settlement of the State

Says the Washington Chronicle "The Chicago Post thus touches up our District Attorney"

"The Attorney of the District of Columbia announces his intention to sue Susan B Anthony, as president of the Woman Suffrage Convention, for giving an exhibition without a license, 'choosing the sapient man 'to consider the convention an exhibition' Susan will not object She is used to being sued But now whose business is it to sue the Corporation Attorney of the District of Columbia for exhibition of himself, without a license, as the Corporation donkey?"

Col Meek's Description of the National Park.

The following is a description given by Col Jo Meek, of the scenery of the Great National Park, as seen by him in 1829 The Colonel says

"On arriving at the great Yellowstone lake, it was a cold, clear day with snow on the ground, and on the hills that surround the small valley which is one of Nature's greatest curiosities Summer seemed to dwell forever in this cozy retreat Blooming flowers of hundreds of varieties added their loveliness to the dark green sward, that bid defiance to hoar winter above Jets of water were thrown 100 feet in the air by escaping steam in the lake, while along the edge of the lake places boiling like pots of mush, would suddenly explode, throwing mud and water twenty and thirty feet into the air

On the east of the lake is a very high mountain which Col Meek ascended, hunting for sheep He says

"The scenery from the summit of this mountain exceeds anything he has seen during all his wanderings Standing on the summit, and looking to the east, the Yellowstone river goes winding on down and away in the distance, until sky and earth seem to blend in one when it is lost to sight On the north, the Big and Little Horn can be seen to unite and roll their united waters together until they join the Yellowstone To the southwest rises the great Twelloto mountains, known to mountaineers as the 'Three Tittles'—the three Tetons of the geographies On the west about 25 miles away lies Lewis lake, one of the most beautiful sheets of water in the world, clear as crystal To the west Henry, Pierce, and Lewis Forks start from the great chain of mountains, go rolling on as far as they can reach, forming a junction below, which is known as the Snake river To the north the Gallatin, Madison and Jefferson, go winding away, finally joining together and forming one of the great tributaries, and in fact the head waters of the Missouri river"

On being asked what he thought while standing there the Colonel said "I thought it was a mighty big world for one d—d poor white man."

An Excellent Society

MARSHFIELD, Clackumas Co., February 8, 1873

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

As you take great interest in the progress of agriculture, I write this to inform you that, on January 15th, Mr J Campbell, State Deputy, appointed by the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry, called a meeting of the farmers of Clackamas county, and organized a subordinate Grange at this place.

This is an order which has been in successful operation in the older States during the last five years, and is highly spoken of by those acquainted with its workings. This is the first attempt to organize a society of the order on this coast. The principal advantage of the organization is that it unites the farmers, thus enabling them to co-operate with and protect each other The institution is yet in its infancy here, but reliable men are preparing to canvass the State and country during the coming season, and before fall we hope to see the farmers of the entire Willamet valley united in similar societies for mutual protection and for the advancement of farming interests throughout the Northwest. Any inquiries respecting the order will be cheerfully answered by addressing the Secretary, W. G Welch, Clackamas Postoffice, Clackamas county, Oregon.

Very respectfully,
H B CHAMBERLIN.

Our "Lish," otherwise known as Commissioner of Immigration for the State of Oregon, has made a profound impression upon the editor of the Washington Chronicle, as will be seen by the extract from that paper given below;

General E L Applegate, Oregon Commissioner of Immigration, is an orator and lecturer of original powers and peculiar merit. His idiosyncracies of thought, expression, and style render him as entertaining as the most popular of our humorous lecturers, while his ideas are fresh, and striking In his own "Webfoot" State the people "turn out by the score" to hear him whenever he is announced for a speech or a lecture, and the press of San Francisco and Salt Lake speak in high terms of his lectures in those cities. Gen Applegate proposes remaining for some time in Washington, and it has been suggested that he might be induced to deliver one or more lectures here

WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEB 12, 1873

CAME TO GRIEF.—The reputation of C A. Robeson, the bogus gold discoverer of Oregon, is too well known by this community to require comment. He it was who, by false representations as to the discovery of rich gold deposits, located in some indefinite section of this State, induced, or rather decoyed a number of Bostonians last summer, to this coast. This party from the "Hub" came out ostensibly to "hunt buffalo on the great plains of Eastern Oregon," but the real object of the visit was to search for the precious metal, which Robeson alleged could be found in fabulous quantities in the State. The sequel of the story is too well known. After arriving in Portland Robeson gave the victims of his deception the slip, and forthwith sloped for regions unknown. Robeson came to the surface very recently at San Francisco, and was arrested at once by the authorities. We learn from the Bulletin of that place that he was arraigned before the city court as a suspected felon, and was held in a bond of $500. "Failing to give the required security, he was about to take his reluctant way to the climbs precincts of Bourgrass, when some of those he had interested in his scheme came forward and relieved him of the disagreeable necessity by going on his bond. There were a number of witnesses against him in the court, each of whom owned to having been bit in sums ranging from ten to fifty dollars. They were generally men whom one would be least apt to suspect of being easily gulled. Robeson has certainly played his gold mine game pretty extensively throughout the country; but he has not been very successful here, and as he is a consumptive whom the cold hospitalities of the workhouse could but have hastened a step further toward his grave, and, as he has a wife and child who must have suffered anxiety and shame if nothing else, to his imprisonment, there was a slight feeling of sympathy for him, especially among those who have not lost anything by his scheme. There seems no doubt, however, that he deserves all he would have gotten, being regarded as a confidence man of the first water. Our account of his transactions is abundantly testified to by men who are cognizant of the facts. There is a gentleman now in the city who, with his partner in business, lost two thousand dollars by Robeson's first effort with his pretended discovery."

JUVENILE THEATRICALS.—The juvenile mind of Portland, after having devoted its energies assiduously to the invention of every species of devilry, has at length centered upon a new diversion. The "new departure" of the youthful mind consists of theatricals. A number of ambitious juveniles of this city, blessed with that degree of audacity necessary to face the foot lights with success, and afflicted with an ardent attachment for the histrionic art, have organized an amateur company, and propose to entertain themselves and their associates with a series of tragedies of a mild school. The stage smitten youths have procured a small hall, fitted up a stage, with rude scenery, curtain, seats, etc., and propose to open a brief theatrical season, to commence on Thursday evening next. Whether the venture will result in financial failure or otherwise to the enterprising and public spirited management, remains to be seen. It might be well to caution the inexperienced young gentlemen that it is scarcely prudent to invest very large sums of money in procuring mechanical properties, and other things requisite to run a theater in first-class style, until they experiment a little on the appreciation of this public. The orchestra, we learn, will consist of a single violinist of a tender age, who has formerly been attached to a band of strolling minstrels, and as a manipulator of horse hair and feline intestines, is voted a success. No pains or expense, we are notified, have been spared to render the opening night all the management could expect, or the audience desire. Candidly we confess, that if the sympathies and co-operation of the boodlum element of the city can be thoroughly enlisted in this new departure, public countenance and encouragement ought not to be withheld. With that boisterous element, it would be one step towards reform.

BUILDING SOCIETY.—From the report of the Secretary of the Catholic Building Society, extending over a period of time from the date of the formation of the Society, July 31st, 1871, to Dec. 31st, 1872, we learn the following: During that time, 203 persons have become members, 29 of whom have resigned. Of that number, twenty subscribers have not paid anything, forty-one have paid in full; of the remaining 142 about 40 per cent. of their subscriptions have been paid in. As the result of this work, the following is a summary of the collection and balances:

Amount paid by members	1,697 00
Balance due on subscriptions	1,949 50
CASH.
To amount collected from subscribers	$1,697 00
Amount contributed by 48 persons	241 00
Amount paid in advance to subscribers	19 50
On hand	$1,957 50

A meeting of the Society was held on the 9th inst., at which the following officers were elected. President, M. J. Gleason; Vice President, Wm. Condon; Secretary, D. J. Malarkey, Treasurer, J. E. Fierons, V. G.

A NEWSPAPER LAWSUIT.—Most of the readers of this paper doubtless recollect Dr. A. A. Ames, who was associate editor of the Daily Bulletin of this city, at the time that journal was commenced. Ames, on his return to San Francisco, became connected with the Alta. About a year since, he went to New York and was employed in some capacity on the Times. And now comes the St. Paul Press and states that Dr. Albert A. Ames, late city editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, has just begun a suit against the Tribune for a breach of contract, and for salary alleged to be due him. It appears that the proprietors of that journal employed Ames on the 7th of last August to act as city editor for one year, at a salary of $40 per week; but for some reason refused to allow him to continue in their service after last November. He therefore commenced action for breach of the contract.

PREPARING A BLACK LIST.—Last evening a meeting was held by the carriers of the several daily papers published in the city to devise means and take such steps as would insure protection to themselves. It was mutually resolved to prepare a list of delinquent subscribers who persistently refuse or fail to pay their subscription. This roll was to be known as the "black list" among the carriers. If a subscriber declines or fails to pay one carrier his name is added to the "black list," and the carriers of the other papers are notified of the delinquency, and no papers will be furnished him while he remains in arrears. This agreement if strictly enforced and scrupulously abided by, will afford mutual protection to the carriers, and will justly prevent "the man who refuses to pay the printer" from receiving a paper.

BUILDING A FIRE.—Two small boys were discovered yesterday afternoon engaged in the innocent (?) amusement of building a fire in the large shed on Third street, between Yamhill and Taylor, which is occupied by Northrup & Thompson as a storing place for hard wood. When seen the boys had succeeded in getting a brisk fire among the planks on the ground. Their quiet little game was suddenly interrupted by several persons who saw the smoke ascending through the roof. The fire was timely discovered and extinguished, or else quite a destructive conflagration would have resulted.

ARRIVED FROM CANADA.—The venerable Mother Stanislaus, Mother General of the Sisters of the Holy Names, accompanied by Sisters Mary Adolphe and Mary Eugene, arrived in this city a few days since. They came from Montreal, Canada, via Oakland California. The Reverend Mother is on a visiting tour to St Mary's Academy, and the several other institutions of her Order in this country, and will stay among us several weeks—visiting during this time, the academies at Salem St Pauls, Jacksonville and Dalles.

NO TIDINGS.—Up to date no intelligence has been received of the whereabouts of the steamer Geo S Wright, due from Sitka and way ports. This steamer is overdue about eighteen days, and her continued absence causes much apprehension as to the vessel's safety. Storm bound, disabled, or what is worse still, a total loss, are the only causes which could occasion such a protracted delay. It is to be sincerely hoped that all the fears concerning the safety of the steamer may prove entirely groundless.

IN SESSION.—The Grand Encampment of the Independent Champions of the Red Cross is now in session at Neuparel Hall, C. E Burrows, G. E. C., of Salem, presiding.

NEW LODGE.—A new lodge of the order of Independent Champions of the Red Cross will be organized this week

NEEDS ATTENTION.—The condition of North Front street, between C and D, is such as to require immediate attention. The planks which were laid some time ago, have been bruised and broken to pieces by the constantly passing of heavy vehicles, and have worked down into the mud. The street, for the distance of a block, is almost impassable, and as it is more frequently traveled than any other stretch of street in the city, it certainly ought to be repaired at once.

GRAND CHANCELLOR EXPECTED.—Maj. M. P. Berry, we learn, during his absence East, was appointed to act as Deputy Grand Chancellor for Oregon, for the order of Knights of Pythias, on his return to this State. He is expected to arrive on the next steamer. On his arrival he will proceed to impart the necessary instructions to the Lodge of that order recently instituted in this city.

AT ASTORIA.—The Felix Mendelssohn is still at Astoria, all ready to proceed to sea, awaiting a favorable opportunity to present. She was to have made an attempt to cross the bar yesterday, but with what success, we are not informed. The bar has been exceedingly rough for the last week, and heavily ladened vessels could not cross without hazard, even in tow of a powerful tug.

THE GERMAN FESTIVAL.—The German Benevolent Association met last evening at their rooms to close up the business relating to the recent festival. The report of the Treasurer shows the following result, which is gratifying indeed. Total receipts, $2,702 50, expenses, $712. Net proceeds, $1,990 59.

FAILED TO PASS OUT.—The bark Whittington attempted to pass out to sea on Monday last. She is drawing over 18 feet, and the bar proved so rough that the attempt was abandoned for the present. The vessel now lies at anchor at Sand Island, and will cross the bar the first favorable opportunity.

APPOINTED TO CONFER.—The Hibernian Benevolent Society of this city, has, we learn, appointed a committee to confer with similar committees on the part of other societies for the proper celebration of the 17th of March, St. Patrick's Day. The intention is to make this year's celebration superior to any ever had here.

ALL DISCHARGED.—The ship Victoria Cross has completed discharging her cargo of railroad iron at Astoria. She will start for Portland in tow of one of the tugs to-day. This ship is under charter to carry hence a cargo of wheat to England.

ANOTHER FORCE.—An additional force of carpenters went up to the Dalles yesterday to work on the cabin of the new steamer at that place. There are now constantly employed nearly twenty men, on the upper works of the steamer.

IN BALLAST.—The schooner Gotama is now at Comentville receiving a cargo of lumber for San Francisco. She came in ballast to Astoria. This is the first time that vessel has ever entered the mouth of the Columbia.

MRS. G. H. CLARKE would announce to her customers that she has received another invoice of the new Alpine Hats, both in straw and felt, at Washington street, next door to Clarke, Henderson & Cook.

PROMOTED TO PURSER.—Mr. J. C. Williams, the courteous and obliging freight clerk on the O. S. N. Co.'s wharf, has been appointed Purser on the steamer Rescue for the present.

AT ANCHOR.—The brig Pathfinder was passed by the Josie McNear yesterday morning about seven miles above Astoria, where she was lying at anchor.

SOCIABLE.—The ladies of the First Baptist church of this city will hold a festival in the vestry of the church this evening.

ADMITTED.—In the United States Court yesterday A. Myers was admitted to citizenship.

ROAD DOWN THE RIVER.

A good, smooth, level road, leading north from the city of Portland to Columbia county, avoiding the river bank, subject to frequent overflow, and the ups and downs along the mountain side, has long been needed. Portland is sadly deficient in good roads leading to the country. The only one sufficiently smooth for a pleasant drive is the Macadamized road, and that in consequence of having so much travel, becomes so dusty as to make it sometimes unpleasant, so that the thought of a new thoroughfare being opened, affording a new route and new scenery, for pleasant drives is quite cheering. We learn that viewers have been appointed by the County Commissioners to view and locate a road running down the river who, with the assistance of Mr. Barrage, the County Surveyor, have completed their work and made their report. The road leaves the city at the northwest corner of the city limits. After reaching Balch creek it takes nearly a straight line for nearly seventeen miles in a northerly direction, running nearly parallel with the river. With very few exceptions, the line of the new road is located about 6 feet above the high water line of 1862—passing through a beautiful, level country, thereby converting a large body of land lying idle, into desirable sites for homesteads, and affording them an easy and pleasant road to and from our city. Taken altogether it is certainly a valuable acquisition to the city of Portland, and one that has long been needed. It is to be hoped, therefore, that our County Commissioners will give the enterprise every encouragement in their power, and those immediately interested in it will hasten the opening and improving of the same, for it is the right road in the right place.

Portland, Feb. 11, 1873. CITIZEN.

A "solitary horseman" might have been seen "tearing along the road" leading from East Portland, last Sunday afternoon, at a furious rate. The animal appeared to be beyond the control of the rider, who was shouting for assistance. The results of the escapade is shrouded in profound mystery. The ghostly genius of the Herald is invited to resume the thread we thus abruptly drop, and continue it ad libitum.

A Seventh street gentleman, of broad social views, wrote a note to the handmaid who wrestles with his crockery, inviting her to take a buggy ride with him. Unfortunately the slave was unable to read, and brought the note to the wife of his bosom to decipher. Wretched and heart sick, the miserable woman waited in agonizing suspense till her husband's return, and the family physician says he didn't consider it possible for a delicate female to do so much damage.

Croakers who complain about Webfoot weather, should read the following order, which was sent from New York to St. Paul, Minn., during the cold weather: "Send me a Romeo nose at once and a left ear, as I see by a paragraph from a St. Paul paper, that noses, and ears, and fingers, are picked up on the streets in your city as thick as flies in buy time, and I had the sad misfortune to part with mine while walking up Broadway, and still the thermometer was not happy."

"FOSSILIZED JOURNALISM."

Our neighbor of the Herald was in his usual mood yesterday morning for bragging on himself, and calls his paper "a live paper." Now, we propose to show what kind of a live paper the Herald is, and if we can't make the egotistical young man who draws on his contemporaries for most of the truths he publishes and on his imagination for a great many falsehoods he puts forth to the public, feel a little ashamed that he ever mentioned "fossilized journalism," of which the Herald is certainly a complete specimen, we will conclude that testimony on any point is useless. To do this we need only reproduce some items of news which have appeared in that paper, and also in our own during a short period of time past, and the dates of their appearance in each. We do not care that the Herald daily takes these items from our columns without giving the credit which ordinary newspaper courtesy would dictate, but only desire to show the handsome young man who with such unblushing pomposity parades his own peculiar faults before the world, and says, "See how great a fishing my neighbor has." What a blunder he has made. But here are the proofs, and we ask the reader to observe them:

The following sent us by our Jefferson correspondent, was published in our issue of Feb. 1st: "The Rowor Hosiery Company has got new machinery from the East. Conner & Barnett's mill has shut down, except for custom grinding. J. J. Brown of Salem, has removed his stock of goods to Jefferson. The school house at Jefferson is an incorporated institution, employs two teachers, has an endowment fund of several thousand dollars, and furnishes a free school about six months in the year. Jefferson is going to send a petition to Congress asking the passage of a United States law abolishing the manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors in any of the States or Territories."

The same item verbatim appeared in the Herald of the 2d without any credit being given to this paper from which it was stolen.

The same is entirely true of the following, except it was published in this paper of the 3d inst., and in the Herald of the 4th inst.:

The noted Baptist preacher, Rev. Jonb Powell, is dead. His unusual eccentricity made him quite a local celebrity, and his preaching was always attended by large crowds, many going to hear him more out of motives of curiosity and to be amused, than in a devotional spirit. He has resided in Oregon since 1852, and died at his residence near Scio, in Linn county, on the 25th ult. Many who have laughed at his preaching will sigh at the news of his death.

The same is true of the following, except it was sent by our Oakland correspondent, and was published by us on the 4th, and by the Herald on the 5th:

Much of the business of the old town of Oakland has been transferred to the new town of the same name, nearly a mile distant. Two business houses, a schoolhouse and a grist mill remain in the former and give it some life. The two places together contain an estimated population of about 400.

The above are only given as a specimen of the way in which this braggadocio makes up "a live paper." Through carelessness or laziness—more likely the latter—he almost invariably waits a day after he receives his State and Territorial exchanges to make up the columns of his paper under those heads, and takes them just as they are collated by the OREGONIAN's news editor. With items of this nature, as well as matters of recent interest, which the Herald has published from one day to two weeks, and in some cases months, after they had appeared in the OREGONIAN, we might fill whole columns without going over a great length of time. We acknowledge that in localizing events related in exchanges, and "blocking" them up so as to make them suit this locality, without any regard to their truth or falsity, as well as the publication of sensational stories of a certain unmentionable character, the Herald surpasses anything in the way of a respectable newspaper ever published in Portland, for that is a kind "li(e)ve journalism" to which we make no pretensions. In these respects the Herald is welcome to the field, while we expect to go on for nishing fresh [illegible]sible and reliable news, to find out which [illegible] only read the Herald will have [illegible]y longer than they would if they [illegible] whose reporters are not afraid [illegible] make fewer visits to free lunch h[illegible] we know.

A Dangerous Atmosphere.
The great atmospheric wave which, the meteorologists tell us, sweeps over the whole United States from the Pacific coast, at this season, is loaded with unwholesome vapors that chill the body and disturb all its functions. Perspiration is checked, the stomach is deranged, the bowels and the liver sympathize with that organ, the nerves and muscles are affected, pulmonary complaints are engendered, and the spirits are more or less depressed. These are among the common effects produced by the moist, ungenial winds prevalent in the winter months. But if the system is toned and fortified in advance with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, no danger need be apprehended from any condition of the atmosphere. The "ill wind that blows nobody any good" will not be likely to blow any harm to him who strengthens and regulates his internal organs with this wholesome vegetable tonic and alterative, and clothes his outside in a manner suitable to the season. The seeds of fever and ague and other diseases of an intermittent or remittent type are now in the air, and are liable to be planted in the system, to germinate and bring forth bitter fruit, either immediately or at a later period unless due sanitary precautions are taken to ward them off. Of all safeguards against malaria, this famous vegetable antidote is the best, and of all remedies for the painful ailments caused by damp, cold and sudden changes of temperature, such as rheumatism, chills, irregularities of the bowels, bilious attacks and indigestion, it is the most reliable and the most agreeable.

The Pittsburgh Catholic says: Our people have at last opened their eyes, and have looked with fear and trembling on the alarmingly rapid progress that the demon intemperance is making in our midst. They have made a high and holy resolve within their own breasts to combat the demon and save themselves, their families and our holy church from its blighting influence. The war cry has been raised, every good and honest man will unite his voice with the grand chorus that will not cease until it makes itself heard by every man in the community, until it shouts into the ears of the abettors of intemperance, and convincingly brings before their minds the awful evils that this demon has brought upon us. No outside influence has been exerted, but every good man has risen up as if by a miracle determined as far as in him lies to stop the evil. Our people, then, are in earnest. They go to work with a will, and their efforts will and must be successful. Temperance associations are being organized in connection with all our churches.

The Tweed Trial.

A TILT BETWEEN TILDEN AND FIELD.

From the New York Herald of January 28th we take the following account of Samuel J. Tilden's tilt with David Dudley Field, in the Tweed trial:

Q. There was a notable contest at one time between what was known as the Young Democracy and the old or Tammany Hall Democracy, of which Mr. Tweed was a member. You were allied with the Young Democracy, were you not? A. I had very little to do with them. I was not concerned in that contest except to have two conferences on the subject of a city charter; I went to Albany and made a speech against the present charter before the Senate Committee, of which Mr. Tweed was Chairman.

Q. That was a very violent contest, I believe, over that charter? A. It did violence to no person, so far as I know of.

A FEARFUL "HOOK."

Q. Was it violent on the part of the side to which you were attached? A. I was not attached to that side—I acted on my own hook. [Laughter.]

Q. Well, as there were already two sides in the contest, yours must have been a third "hook?" [Laughter.] A. [With a slow, emphatic accent and a snapping eye.] My hook—was an independent personal hook.

This was too much, and it would be difficult to imagine anything which could have more completely upset the gravity of the whole Court. The audience gave vent to one united roar of laughter, in which Tweed himself, the counsel and even the Judge joined, though, of course, His Honor suppressed the merriment that tingled down to his toes. Mr. Tremain actually screamed and Judge Davis flushed to the very ears. A gavel was no where in quelling such an outburst; and the fact is that probably than Sammy Tilden, with those seven simple words, could have provoked such hilarity. It was all in his tone, accent, deliberation and the naive expression of his mischievous looking face.

Q. [By Mr. Field.] Then this investigation of these accounts was on that "personal, independent hook?"

A. Yes.

Q. How did it happen that you got into the accounts of private individuals in these banks? A. I examined the Keyser warrants in the Comptroller's office shortly after Mr. Green entered that office; Keyser alleged that the endorsements of his name on the backs of some of them were forgeries, and—

Mr. Field—I didn't ask you about that. How did you get the private accounts?

Mr. Tilden (evidently irritable)—You won't let me tell you without interruptions. Now, you just sit down and I'll answer you. (Laughter.)

Mr. Field (blandly)—Thank you. But I have been sitting for some time, and it relieves me to stand up.

Mr. Tilden (smiling a roguish smile)—Well, I shall be most happy to have you relieved in any way—(resuming testimony)—There was a struggle at that time going on to oust the Comptroller, and——

Mr. Field—Answer my question—was that struggle going on in the bank? [Laughter.]

Mr. Tilden became very much irritated and put his foot down altogether.

A FEARFUL ROW.

Mr. Peckham—Go on, Mr. Tilden.

Mr. Tilden—I can't go on when he stands there and browbeats me as he is doing. [Sensation.]

Mr. Field (with evident surprise)—Why, sir, I—I—certainly didn't mean to have that effect. I was

Mr. Tilden (indignantly)—Well, sir, I consider your conduct insolent and indecent. [Greater sensation.]

Mr. Field (very calmly)—Well, indeed! If the witness was not ill, as I am led to believe he is, I should speak differently in response to this language.

Mr. Tilden (very excitedly)—You can speak as you please, sir, and so will I!

* * * * * * *

ANOTHER SHINDY.

Quite a tedious examination followed on this point, and finally the witness was told to examine the bank books, which were already in Court. In the course of his examination Mr. Taynter, a gentleman employed in the Comptroller's office, appealed to be aiding Mr. Tilden to find a particular entry. Mr. Field objected to Mr. Taynter's assistance in a manner somewhat captious, and instantly there was a perfect jargon of reorimination and sarcasm.

In the course of it one of the counsel for defence got up and said something about "protecting" his "associate," and that "if he was examining the witness he would annihilate him," or something of that tenor.

Judge Davis quietly suggested: "Mr. Field is of age and can take care of himself."

A "SETTLER."

As the bellicose lawyer sat down he appeared to feel he had been guilty of a blunder, and a bias plainly resounded through the Court, mingled with quite an atmosphere of sensation.

Mr. Field said: "I am disposed to deal lightly with this, as I understand Mr. Tilden is suffering from ill health."

A Voice (sotto voce)—And over age.

Mr. Tilden again made a very sharp remark to Mr. Field.

Mr. Field, evidently exasperated, said somewhat warmly—I now give the gentleman notice that if he persists in this once more I shall answer him in a way that will not prove agreeable to him. The witness must stop.

Mr. Tilden (sharply)—Yes, and the counsel must "stop!"

The Court rapped for order, and stated that if there was any person present who was able to furnish the Court or witness any assistance in understanding these books they were at liberty to do so, and that when the defence required it similar assistance should be extended to them if desirable.

Mr. Field—But I submit, your Honor, that—

Judge Davis—That's right. I wish you would submit without any more of this disputation. Crier, adjourn the Court.

In a trice the proclamation of adjournment had been made by Mr. Valentine, who knows it "by heart" as well as he knows his prayers, and, amid ripples of laughter, provoked by the Judge's witticism, the spectators and counsel dispersed. As Mr. Field and Mr. Tilden live on opposite sides of Gramercy square it was thought that some lively snow balling might be indulged in there last night, but up to midnight nothing had been flung.

A Miser's Freak.

One of the old, leading citizens of New Orleans, who died a few years ago, and by the schedule of whose estate it appeared was worth a round million more than had been reputed, was slightly touched with that disease now nearly drowned out of society by the flood called millionaire, and which was known as miser. A certain beverage, dispensed at five cents a glass, and which had been a few years in vogue in our city, had long excited the curiosity of our friend, until at last it overcame that prudence which we called above by another name. One balmy morning he was seen at the corner of Camp street and Natchez alley, where the late R. F. Nichols in those days kept his popular establishment, apparently in an uneasy state of mind, and was presently observed to pass softly in. This was the first and only time such a circumstance had ever happened, and it was not strange that a few pedestrians should find themselves unconsciously standing together outside watching. It need not be supposed the old spendthrift faced that way, or incurred any danger of discovering that he was detected, or raised his eyes high enough to encounter any stray smile that might have been playing on the face of the little fellow who waited on him that idle morning. Indeed, sooner than we write it, the thing, for better or worse, was done, and the victim reached a conscious state in time to receive various queer salutations and greetings passing out.

But it was one of those things which work, as Artemus Ward might express it, on a "man's in'ards." The next day he was not seen on the street, which excited much wonder. That morning, however, a friend passing his bachelor's room, and who had no knowledge of the previous accident, heard him speaking very earnestly, as if in a quarrel, and, accompanying his words as emphasis, plying a rawhide with vigor and effect. It was known he never used a whip with his slaves; and, determined to solve the matter, his friend stopped up on the porch to hear, as he could not see. The flogging abated, and breathless, and apparently in pain, the operator in slow and broken sentences, soliloquized: "Will you do it again, you extravagant, prodigal rascal? Five cents gone to the dogs. What would your credit be good for if it should become known? Would anybody trust you? Wouldn't you die a beggar, as you ought?" And presently calling himself by his christian name, or its abridgement, he responded, conceding the wrong, and delivering himself in a solemn way of a "sacred oath" never to repeat the offense—"no; never, never." He sentenced himself also to confinement at home that day, but the next reappeared to receive various queer congratulations which perplexed him.

This biographical incident has never been related, and we are led to recall it by hearing of a recent case in New England in which the offender, being a judge, was better situated to inflict justice. He had one morning, at near the hour of court, "overtaken himself in liquor." Feeling bound to do justice without "regard to persons," he opened court, called the case of the Commonwealth against himself, declared both parties present and ready for trial, and "went on with the case." On relating the charge he declared the facts known to the court and waived the evidence. Then he pronounced judgment, "guilty," and, with a view to sentence, asked the prisoner if he had anything to say. The latter, in the second, same person, singular, declared he was ashamed of himself, but hoped for clemency as he was going to reform. "The prisoner will stand up," said the stern old Justice. "Now," he continued. "I am very sorry you have been brought into this court on such a charge. Do you know it seriously effects your good name, beside setting a bad example for better men to follow? If you go on at this rate you will bring disgrace and sorrow on your family. I sentence you to pay a fine of $10, or to go jail for thirty days." The "prisoner" elected to pay the fine, which was done, when court adjourned by inclosing it to the master of the town for the poor box.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Financial.

TUESDAY EVENING, Feb. 11, 1873.

Gold in New York to-day, 114¾.

Portland Legal Tender rates, 87½c buying; 88½c selling.

Gold bars are quotable at 800 fine.

Late Eastern advices by mail report but little if any change in the financial aspect, owing principally to the fact that the snow blockade which had checked business of all kinds for a week prior to our last dates. At Boston on the 31st ult the money market remained easy, the demand however, was sufficient to give free employment to all surplus funds offering. Call loans ruled at 7 per cent, while discounts showed the usual variations. The bank statements were stronger, showing an increased reserve in proportion to the liabilities. The Chicago Journal of Commerce says "The probability is that the money market will continue strin gent until large shipments of grain, provisions, etc., shall have been made. In the meantime bankers will handle their funds carefully, accommodating only choice customers. Borrowers forced onto the curb stone are compelled to pay 1½ per cent. per month. And yet there are large sums of money seeking investment at legal rates where real estate security is given." At New York on the 28th the money market was active among the stock-brokers and steady among the government dealers. With the latter the rates on call were 6 and 7 per cent. On pledge of the usual Stock Exchange collaterals the rate most of the day was 7 per cent only, with exception of prime houses at plain 7 per cent. In the afternoon the demand became more urgent and in the dealings on the sidewalk the rate advanced to 7 per cent., plus a commission of 1-64, but at the close fell off again to 6@7 per cent, some small amounts having been loaned at 6 per cent. The dealings in commercial paper were on a more active basis, and prime names were taken quite freely at 5@9 per cent. discount.

The foreign exchange market was lower under a better supply of bills, and the leading bankers reduced their rates for sterling to 109¾ and 110⅜, on which they allowed a liberal brokerage.

The Foreign Money Market.

The London quotations on the 31st came a little lower for consols, as if they were affected by the growing agitation of the Khivan or Asiatic question between England and Russia, but strong and higher for United States bonds, the chief feature being a rise of ⅝ in the new fives, followed by a reaction of ¼ per cent. The '67's advanced to 93. Erie shares are unsettled and lower, the price falling from 51 to 50¾, and rallying to 50⅝—which last is still considerably below the New York quotation.

The Next Great Panic.

The commercial results of the year are generally favorable. 1873 is expected to be but little more than a repetition of 1872. But we are reminded that we are a year nearer to that periodical revulsion which has marked every decade in our commercial history. [The last one in England was in 1866.] The meaning of this is that we are so much nearer to a panic, and the question is from what cause the panic, when it comes, will arise. It seems to be thought that the cause will be more subtle, that it will arise from combinations of foreign bankers drawing bills on each other, whose paper will not necessarily be suspected, because the cliffe of them have sold their signatures in connection with the payment of the French indemnity for a consideration. At this moment the enormous extent which the exchange transactions of the world have reached is supposed as likely to afford the means of circulation of fictitious paper, and already the necessity of caution is preached, especially in the event of a sudden outbreak of political alarm.

Comparison of the Imports.

	1871.	1872.	1873.
Dry goods	$3,169,101	$5,765,466	$4,868,603
General mdse	6,596,603	4,228,999	5,737,805
Total for week	$9,765,704	$9,984,435	$10,106,401
Prev. reported	11,231,325	13,383,030	10,530,269
Since Jan. 1	$20,997,030	$23,388,391	$20,736,669

Foreign Oil Market.

The circular of Messrs. Maclean, Marsh & Co., dated London 11th inst., says the market was firm at £92 for American and £93 for colonial, below which there were no sellers. The price of bright oil was advanced on the 10th inst per gal, viz, to 8d 2d.

Whale oil was quiet, and 38 casks from Bahia, in public sale on the 10th, were bought in at from £35 to £36 for dark to pale, there being no competition for it.

In sperm oil there was no inquiry for American, and the price remained nominal at 1s 2¾d@1s 3d for good quality.

In whalebone the last sale of Davis Strait was at £200 for the continent, and Southern was worth from £280 to £310. The market, however, was rather quiet, and there was no inquiry from the cutlers.

The Iron Trade.

Messrs. Davidge & Wheeler, under date of New York, Jan. 25, sends us the following in reference to the New York market:

American Pig—The market is unsettled, many of the makers declining to offer their stocks at present. Prices, however, remain firm, and we quote nominally as follows; No. 1 Foundry at $48@50, No. 2 at $46@48, and Grey Forge at $40@42.

Scotch—The market is in a very dull state, demand being confined only to meeting the immediate wants of consumers. Holders are firm in their views. We quote Eglinton at $51@52; Glengarnock at $52@53; Gartsherrie and Coltness at $58@56.

New Rails—Are very quiet but firm. English $72@73 gold; American, $80, currency, at works.

Old Rails—With a light demand and small supply, we quote at $36@37, currency, for D. H.'s & T's.

Wrought Scrap—In fair demand and nominally at $50 @52 for No. 1 from yard, and $40@47 from dock.

The California Wheat Market.

The following statement in reference to the condition of the wheat market of California is from the San Francisco Bulletin, and presents rather the most encouraging view of the prospect for getting off the surplus of that State of any we have observed. The paper mentioned says:

The estimated surplus for export from the current crop has been given at 500,000 tons, or 10,000,000 centals. It is still believed that this quantity will be reached by the close of the year. The quantity shipped in the first seven months, as stated above, is 7,262,000 centals, valued at $12,714,000. We have thirty-three vessels of over 57,000 tons of tonnage in port to load wheat. These will carry about 48,000 tons wheat and most of them will be off by the 1st of March. The condition then will be as follows:

Wheat and flour exported, centals	7,262,200
Vessels in port to load in February	960,000
Total	8,222,000

Admitting that we export 10,000,000 centals by the end of the year, we have 1,778,000 centals for which to procure tonnage during the four months ending June 30, as follows:

Surplus for export, centals	10,000,000
Exported to March 1st	8,222,000
Remaining surplus	1,778,000

To carry the remaining surplus we need about 60,000 tons of tonnage. Over one-sixth of this quantity is now ready in port awaiting charter, and the remainder will be here long before it is wanted. Our present inward bound fleet foots up about 120,000 tons, from 20,000 to 30,000 tons of which is fully due. As we need only 60,000 tons for wheat, exclusive of what is already in port, there is 71,000 tons to arrive during the next four months for lumber, coal and other purposes.

From the above it would appear that there is now a good reason to expect that the surplus carried over from this year in California will be much smaller than was at first supposed. While that fact alone does not materially signify to the producer in Oregon, yet taken into connection with our nearness to the point of San Francisco and the facilities here for giving quick dispatch to all vessels that may arrive, it leads to a hope that the removal of the "log-jam" of the Columbia river bar would also insure us a supply of tonnage adequate to our necessities at rates, under competition that might arise, which would bring about some advance in the figures paid for wheat, yet before the begining of the harvest year of 1873-4.

Enormous Stocks.

The following taken from an Eastern exchange in relation to the amount of grain in store about the 18th ult, at some of the great grain centers of America, will be found interesting as a matter of statistics:

The stock of grain in the Chicago Elevators on Saturday was 6,340,844 bu, including 1,443,379 bu Wheat, 3,122,944 bu Corn; 1,104,879 bu Oats; 240,101 bu Rye, and 324,623 bu Barley.

The supply of grain at the principal points of accumulation in the United States and Canada, on the 18th inst, was 20,469,033 bu, embracing 5,767,210 bu Wheat, 9,225,814 bu Corn, 3,657,927 bu Oats, and 1,811,982 bu Barley.

The New York city warehouses contain 663,000 bu Wheat, 6,826,000 bu Corn, 1,362,000 bu Oats; 41,000 bu Rye, 320,000 bu Barley.

Produce Market—Shipping.

Under this head we have but few comments to make, as but very few changes have occurred than for in the week. The receipts have generally been quite large, in almost every article, exceeding those for a corresponding period of last week. The wheat market is devoid of activity, it being reported that buyers are already in command of enough to load the vessels here and that other vessels which had been expected to come to this port had changed their course and are going to San Francisco, but of the entire correctness of these report, we have no means of knowing, and we can see no general reason for believing the latter part of the story, unless it be from the fact that the frequent delays which vessels are having to enter the Columbia river bar, not with of late has discouraged shipowners from attempting it without extraordinary inducements. At any rate some of our exporters to-day decline to book any better offer than $1 60 ℔ cental, the lowest figure quoted for some time. As will be seen by reference to our Liverpool advices, that market has receded 2d. We regret the apparent disposition of prices to droop, as many of the producers in Oregon have been holding back large quantities of their surplus, and it is estimated that, at a fairly remunerative price, 1,000,000 bushels could yet be purchased in the counties of the Willamet Valley. California seems from all accounts to have a large quantity of tonnage in port and to arrive, and why Oregon should suffer such a lack as she does is not so easily accounted for. We op ne that there is more than one reason for it, however, but among the chief is that before referred to, the difficulty in crossing the bar. Had the parties who control the towing business at that place determined to check the commercial growth of our State, and not let back a few years, is seems to us that no better plan to accomplish that object could have been devised than the one pursued. Of course, when it is generally reported and cannot be denied that ships can sail with ordinary good fortune from Honolulu to the bar in less time than they can come from outside to Astoria, no vessels with anything like business sagacity in their owners would attempt the trip if reasonably fair prospects offered for other ports. But we trust that before another harvest year shall begin the facilities for bringing vessels across the bar will be such that vessels will come here as readily as they now go to San Francisco.

Everything that Oregon produces for export, to-day feels the depressing effect of the high rates of transportation, both interior and by sea. It may be a discouraging fact, and we are somewhat loth to state it, but, nevertheless, it is true that there are at this time but a very few of our products that promise any margin of profit by shipping to San Francisco. Take for instance the staple of bacon and we find public and private advices indicate the lightest market known for years. Dealers here decline to ship in the present condition of the market. The amount in store here is very large and buyers are very indifferent about receiving any further consignments until some change is effected. A comparison of our dispatches with the prices which prevail here will show the same state of facts to exist with regard to many other products.

Our quotations of yesterday are without important change to-day other than noted.
